of mercy, worked as a pharmacist with exotic poisons and took part in archaeological excavations in Egypt, flew on a newly invented airplane, fearlessly drove a car, adored horseback riding and surfing, even made a trip around the world. The details of the eventful life of the novelist explain the origins of her rich imagination and, therefore, reasons of her enormous popularity.

Agatha Christie creates detective stories which are based on guesses and intrigue dominates over psychological patterns [4, p. 33]. Her novels are followed by rules of genre however it does not detract from creating the pictures of everyday life and morals of different social British circles.

Being one of the most famous detective authors and most published writers in the world Agatha Christie did really know her skills and limitations. Her aim was to write thrilling crime novels that can puzzle and confuse. In her literary works Agatha considers the psychology of ordinary person, revealing inexhaustible spiritual riches [4, p. 12]. The author is interested not in only exceptional but more specific states of soul which are pertained to dozens of people. Thus Agatha in her observation possesses bigger range of human feelings.

According to the words of John Escott, Agatha was able to keep rules and norms of detective genre along with her individuality. The writer could foresee precisely where and how lull the vigilance. Thus she deflected the suspicion from the real criminal. Therefore a reader despite the plot’s simplicity could not guess a person, who committed a crime. Leitmotif of her creative work serves the importance of the law, the triumph of mind, the protection of human rights and freedom and fair justice. As well the author has given preference to description of domestic situations and traditional English principles [7, p. 83]. Agatha Christie’s literary works differ of simplicity, thus receive recognition from the readers’ points of view.

In the center of Agatha Christie’s attention are small components of everyday life. Agatha described morals of British middle class with big nostalgia and, apparently, used image of people who had known before.

The success of Agatha Christie in the aspect of creating the varieties of plots is caused by her ingenuity, which is directly related to her life. As it can be seen Agatha constantly uses the same situations, characters and decorations. But she reaches the result where her stories make an impression of novelty. It happens due to changing at least one narrative element. If Agatha uses the situation again, she changes features of characters. If she uses characters again, she puts them in new decorations. When Christie expands the story till the size of the novel, she often changes the ending of the story. None of the authors of twentieth century, except Agatha Christie, understood possibilities of such combinations in a full way. It gave readers an opportunity to meet familiar and at the same time new experience [2, p. 135]. We conclude that the analysis of Agatha Christie’s “An Autobiography” gives the investigator an opportunity to study the origins of her writing talent and prove that lifestyle and intellectual outputs are in a close bond.
